Hey Chelsea!

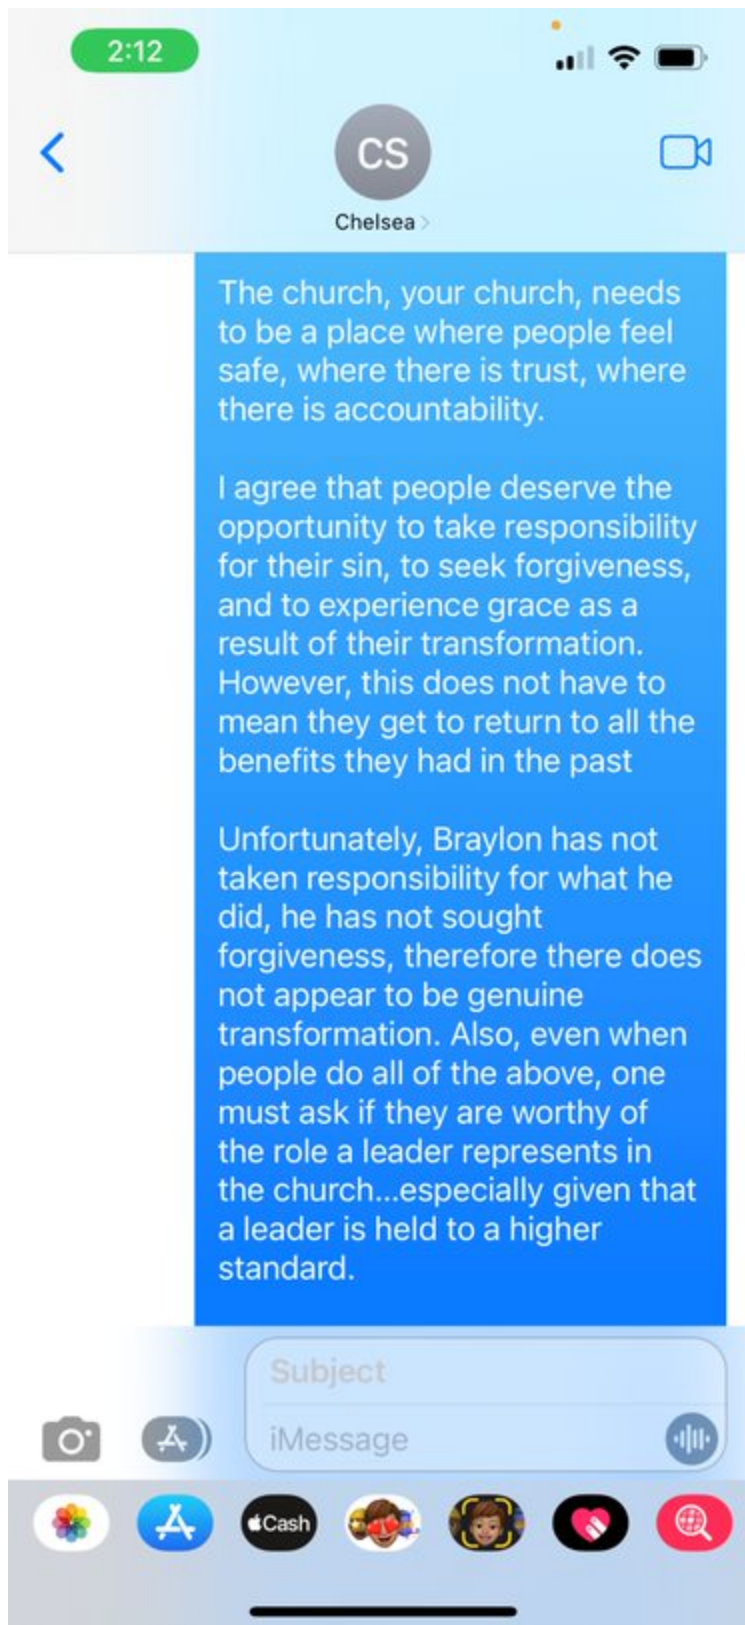

Thank you so much for reaching out to talk to me about Braylon's application to the church. I felt heard and appreciated, and that you honored my experience.

I know you didn't have to reach out or even tell me that he had applied.

As I shared with you on the phone, I think this is an opportunity for the church to take a stand, and not play into the hypocrisy that we're seeing plague so many churches and our community.

The church, your church, needs to be a place where people feel safe, where there is trust, where there is accountability.

The church, your church, needs to be a place where people feel safe, where there is trust, where there is accountability.

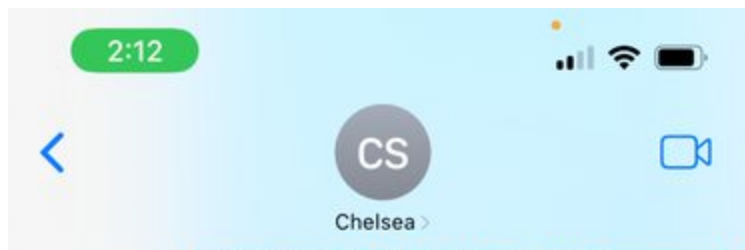

I agree that people deserve the opportunity to take responsibility for their sin, to seek forgiveness, and to experience grace as a result of their transformation. However, this does not have to mean they get to return to all the benefits they had in the past

Unfortunately, Braylon has not taken responsibility for what he did, he has not sought forgiveness, therefore there does not appear to be genuine transformation. Also, even when people do all of the above, one must ask if they are worthy of the role a leader represents in the church...especially given that a leader is held to a higher standard.

who would likely be a much better fit for the culture you aspire to cultivate.

I also would encourage the hiring team to read the outcome of your formal investigation prior to making any hiring decision.

If you think it's appropriate, please keep me updated about your decision. I am available to chat with you or anyone from HR at the church/David etc.

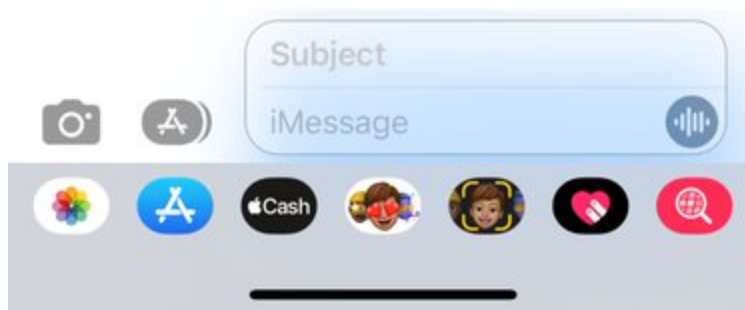

Thanks again ❤️

Chelsea it is very clear where you stand. There is no need to have a conversation today.

Delivered

I'm so sorry you didn't hear from me about the outcome.

The hiring manager for the position considered all the factors, honored your request to make sure to be completely aware of what had happened, read the report and made the decision.

I understand you don't want to talk right now but please know my phone is always open to you!
