Action needed

We are concerned that your copyright notification may not be valid for the video(s) listed below. Please keep in mind that in many countries, it is legal to use copyrighted works in specific ways without the owner's authorization, particularly for transformative purposes such as news reporting, parody, commentary, or review.

Some countries protect such uses under doctrines of "fair use" or "fair dealing," while others allow for specific exceptions to copyright protection.

If you still believe your copyright is infringed by the YouTube video(s) identified below, please explain in detail why you think so. We ask that you provide more detail than was included in your initial notice. Here are questions you may wish to consider:

How much of your copyrighted work is used? How is the market for your original work affected by this use? Does this use significantly transform your original work, or does it serve the same purpose? Does this use fall into an exception to copyright protection? Please note that we may share your response with the uploader(s).
